In a commitment to fostering excellence in healthcare education, 123sonography is offering five scholarships valued at over 6000€ each, totaling more than 30,000€. These scholarships encompass complimentary access to all Echocardiography courses, including Carotid ultrasound, boasting over 40 hours of online content for a year. Participants will undergo comprehensive tracking of their progress and receive a diploma upon completing the program.

The distinguished board of directors overseeing the selection process includes Prof. Thomas Binder, MD, FESC; Elena Surkova, MD, MSC, Ph.D.; Steven J. Lester, MD, FASE; and Georg Goliasch, MD, Ph.D. Reflecting on the significance of ultrasound in healthcare, Prof. Thomas Binder, founder and Chief Medical Officer of 123sonography, states, "While ultrasound is becoming increasingly more important, it is still underutilized in many parts of the world. One reason is the lack of training. Our scholarship will use an online approach to enable young and talented healthcare professionals to harness this technology, whether they work in a tertiary care center or a primary care setting."

The application deadline for this transformative opportunity is set for the 31st of January, 2024, with the announcement of the five winners scheduled for March 1st. As a testament to the impact of previous scholarship recipients, 123sonography proudly acknowledges the success achieved by its past winners, highlighting the valuable contributions they have made in medical echocardiography.
