

About 123sonography

123sonography currently counts 450,000 health care professionals from 175 countries among its international users. Founded in 2009 by Dr. Thomas Binder and located in Vienna, the company offers various online ultrasound courses with international CME certification (AMA PRA-1) (<https://www.123sonography.com/cme-credits>). Since December 2019, following a management change and financial restructuring, the business has been jointly managed by Thomas Binder (LinkedIn) and Kathrin Biernat (LinkedIn). In the same year 2019, 123sonography acquired the US-American company SonoWorld from the Intelios Group, which is one of the major players in the education sector. Ultrasound diagnostics is currently one of the fastest growing markets for imaging techniques in medical technology.

The company's vision is to make medical diagnostics of ultrasound and echocardiography easily and cost-effectively accessible via e-learning to physicians and medical personnel worldwide in the highest quality and professionalism. All 123sonography courses are certified according to AMA PRA Category 1 CME Credits™. The study material consists of videos, interactive case studies, atlas, demos, quizzes and is accessible to all users. The courses can be taken at once or flexibly in different time frames. In addition, live events are held in various countries and cities around the world, for example in Dubai. Partnerships exist with the Medical University of Vienna, the Austrian Medical Association, SonoSkills, Universal Ultrasound Management and 3rd Rock Ultrasound.